Editor’s Note

When I first visited the Maldives as a tourist in 1982, soon after the airstrip was expanded to take long-haul jets, tourism in the islands was already ten years old. Yet most of the streets in Male’ were unpaved and travel from the airport to a resort was by a slow, local boat (dhoni).

In the 35 years since then, I have been lucky enough to visit the Maldives over a 100 times, as a tourist and as a travel writer. I have been amazed to witness the benefits that tourism has brought to the country both in the infrastructure and the betterment of life for Maldivians, especially in education and health.

The Maldives, with its marine life, natural beauty, island tranquility and genuinely welcoming people plus some of the best holiday accommodation in the world with superb international and local cuisine, has become the destination to aspire to for celebrities, jet setters, lovers, thrill seekers, package tourists, budget travellers and everyone wanting to enjoy the holiday of a lifetime.

In this guide I hope you will find all the information you need to help you decide to visit the Maldives and, like me, return again and again.

Warm regards

Welcome to the Maldives

To decide to have a holiday in the Maldives is to choose not just the perfect destination for a vacation, but also to discover the sunny side of life. Welcome to this new experience of holiday enjoyment! Wherever you stay in the Maldives, you are guaranteed to have such a good time you will surely want to return. The Maldives has everything, except for cold weather and mountains. However, there is air-conditioning to keep you cool, and skiing too - but that’s in lagoons not down snowy slopes. If you want the adrenalin of adventure sports, the Maldives has it all, ranging from para-gliding to underwater scooters. Or you can go for a week-long safari on a LiveAboard vessel to dive, discover marine life, see dolphins leaping and try island exploring.

And for sheer escapism, where better than the white sand beaches of the islands, fringed by swaying coconut palms and splashed by the gentle surf of a pristine blue lagoon, just a step away from luxurious accommodation enhanced with personal attention inspired by heartfelt hospitality?

With 118 resorts and 392 guesthouses, as well as 17 city hotels and more than 130 LiveAboard vessels, the Maldives has accommodation to suit every pocket. The industry has matured gracefully over 45 years since organised tourism began by chance in 1972. It is now the most sophisticated and well-run tourist destination in the world, with visitors welcomed warmly by every Maldivian.

A holiday in the Maldives not only provides the ultimate in perfect relaxation, it also introduces guests to the essence of pure natural enjoyment. Welcome!

Geography

The Maldives is an independent republic (formerly a sultanate) in the Indian Ocean, comprising an archipelago of 188 inhabited islands, out of 1,900 islands set in 26 natural atolls. The English word ‘atoll’ derives from Dhivehi (the language of Maldivians): ‘’atholhu’ - meaning ‘a ring shaped reef or chain of islands formed of coral’.

The islands stretch like a garland for 822km from 7 degrees north of the Equator to just south of it, with the greatest width from west to east being 130km. The territory embraces a total area of 90,000 sq km but that includes the sea, which forms 99.6% of the Maldives. The land area of all the islands amounts to 298 sq km. The nearest neighbours are India, 600km distant to the north, and Sri Lanka, 670km to the east.

The islands are small (few are more than one square kilometre in area) and low-lying with neither rivers nor hills, their maximum height being about 2.4m above sea level. A shallow lagoon encircles each island, embraced by reefs; beyond the reefs the ocean deepens to 365m. Male’ the capital city, lies to the north of the centre of the atoll chain and is heavily populated with about 140,000 people and apartment and office blocks squeezed in an area of 5.8 sq km.

Over 115 uninhabited islands throughout the archipelago have been transformed into resorts of luxurious privacy and lush greenery, open only to tourists and staff. In recent years, guesthouses have been built on inhabited islands, giving tourists a wonderful chance to experience the Maldivian side of life.
Climate

Being on the Equator where the sun is hottest, eight hours of brilliant sunshine is almost a daily occurrence in the Maldives, with an average of 230 to 250 hours a month. Expect daytime temperatures to hover around 30 degrees Celsius, dropping to around 23 degrees a night. Rain? Rarely, but when it happens, it’s warm and tropical, refreshing the vegetation while the sea develops waves to thrill surfers. The wettest months are May and November but even then the average rainfall is low and amounts to around 2,133mm annually. Humidity, with water vapour pervading the atmosphere, averages around 75 to 80% although this is tempered by sea breezes wafting over the low-lying islands.

Daylight lasts from 06.00 to 18.30hrs; the daily difference in tidal rise and fall is slight. The climate responds to two monsoon seasons, the Northeast (Inruva meaning easterly winds) from December to April and the Southwest (Hulhangu indicating stronger winds) from May to November. This is dubbed the rainy season only because that’s the period when it might rain.

So when to have that holiday in the sun? As soon as you’re ready. The Maldives has a year round tropical climate and while the weather is unpredictable and squalls can strike suddenly, they are short. For more on climate, log on to: www.meteorology.gov.mv

Maldivian History

Positioned at a crossroads in the Indian Ocean, the islands originally attracted seafarers, merchants and settlers from neighbouring countries who appreciated the calm waters of the lagoons and the bounty of coconuts and fish. Whether people were marooned there by shipwreck or arrived as exiles from places such as India, Malaysia, Indonesia, Africa and even Greece and the Roman Empire, the struggle for survival left little time for disputes so gradually an ad hoc nation of islanders came into being.

Evidence suggests the islands were inhabited over 3,500 years ago with Aryan immigrants starting settlements around 500BC. Historic remains indicate that Buddhists and Hindus brought their own beliefs and, logically, Arab settlers would have brought Islam with them. However, Islam did not become the official religion until 1153 while conversion of all the islanders took a further 60 years, uniting the settlers of the atolls into a nation ruled by a Sultan, and sometimes a Sultana. The post was never hereditary and the ruling council, which included women, selected the sultan.

Various dynasties ruled the Maldives without attracting much attention from the rest of the world, surviving through fishing and trading including the export of cowrie shells which became a currency accepted worldwide and earning the Maldives the nickname of Money Islands. Peace was shattered with the arrival of the Portuguese in the Indian Ocean and they eventually invaded the islands in 1558. Their occupation lasted 15 years until they were ousted by Mohamed Thakurufaanu, a resident of Utheemu, who led a band of Maldivians in seaborne guerrilla warfare against the Portuguese and thwarted their attempts to convert the islanders to Christianity.

Invasions from India followed in the 17th century but these were resisted with Sultan Ibrahim Iskandhar even invading territory of the Rajah of Cannanore and taking hostages, which put an end to Indian interest in the islands for 40 years. There was a brief occupation by Malabars in the 18th century. The Dutch, who were interested in trade through their base in Ceylon (Sri Lanka) surveyed the islands in 1671 but did not stay.

The French (who had a fort in Pondicherry) were allowed to station forces in Male' for a short time to protect the islands from Indian attacks. By the beginning of the 19th century, British power was predominant in the Indian Ocean. To keep the British at bay, in 1887 Sultan Mohamed Mueenuddeen II exchanged letters with the Governor of Ceylon, representing Queen Victoria, enabling the Maldives to enjoy the status of a protected state, although not actually becoming an occupied British Protectorate.

The Sultanate became a Republic in 1953 with Mohamed Ameen Didi (formerly Prime Minister) as President for a few months before the Sultanate was restored. Three years later the Sultanate was abolished again and Ibrahim Nassir was elected President.

Tourism, The Beginning

Begun by Maldivians

Tourism, an expert from the UNDP reported to the government prior to 1971, will never succeed in the Maldives because there are no facilities, no infrastructure.

No one told that to three young men who, by chance, became the pioneers of the country’s tourism industry. One of them, Ahmed Naseem, a young diplomat attached to the Maldives Embassy in Colombo met in 1971 an Italian travel agent who was looking for virgin islands where he and his friends could swim and spear fish. Naseem travelled with him to the Maldives by cargo ship and introduced him to M U Maniku, then in the government’s agricultural department, and ‘Champa’ Hussain Afeef, who was working in the UN office in Male’.

The Italian told them he would bring groups to the Maldives in 1972, if they could provide accommodation. Pooling their resources they hosted the first group in their own homes in Male’, learning to cook what the Italian tourists wanted and taking them around the islands.

Then they leased an uninhabited island, Vihamanafushi, built 30 coconut thatched huts on it, and welcomed the first organised groups of tourists to the resort they named Kurumba (the Dhivehi word for coconut) on 3 October 1972. M U Maniku eventually became Chairman of Universal Resorts, which operates Kurumba as well as many other resorts; Hussein Afeef is still a vital force in tourism development. Ahmed Naseem joined President Ibrahim Nasir in setting up Crescent Tourism Agency to operate and promote resorts.

Visitors, mainly from Italy, Sweden and Germany totalled 3,790 in 1973 and by 1978 tourism had become an informal enterprise with wealthy guests from Europe staying in 26 resorts, and young sun worshippers who followed the hippie trail snaking down from India via Ceylon, lodging with locals on inhabited islands.

In 1978 regulations were introduced to sustain the industry and reduce its disruptive effect on the social and natural environment. Tourists were allowed to stay only in registered resorts on uninhabited islands and spear fishing was banned. Customs and immigration controls were introduced. In 1981, the makeshift airport was opened to long-haul flights and tourism took off.

By 2007, there were 89 resorts. In 2010 a law was passed to encourage the development of independent guesthouses on inhabited islands. This enabled even more Maldivians to benefit directly from tourism - and all tourists, whatever their budget, could enjoy a visit to the Maldives.

People, Culture & Local Cuisine

Over the centuries the sea and religion moulded the personality of Maldivians into devout islanders with a rugged self-assurance and the ability to survive on limited resources. Before tourism, people depended on fishing, not just for food but also for revenue and trade, with the export of fish, in sun-dried and smoked form, to Ceylon.

Over the centuries Maldivians were exposed to different genetical and cultural influences. Traces of Africa, Arabia, Indonesia and India are to be seen in the features of the people and in the culture, especially in the traditional drumming dance of Bodu Beru (sometimes performed at resorts) with its echoes of Africa. The religious discipline of Islam has added a respect for routine, custom and a trust in destiny.

With the opportunities afforded by better income through tourism and access to modern communications, Maldivians have embraced the chance of higher education overseas to contribute to the welfare of the country. The 2008 constitution inspired political participation by ordinary Maldivians and has resulted in people taking a keen interest in government and world affairs.

Prosperity triggered by tourism has changed the simple lifestyle of Maldivians with coral stone cottages being replaced by air-conditioned ten-storey apartment blocks, elegantly designed by Maldivian architects. The corner teashops, where Maldivians pop in for tea and hedhikaa (snacks of pastry stuffed with spicy fish-filling), are being replaced by coffee houses serving fast food.
Things To Do

Contrary to expectations, there is so much to do while staying in the Maldives; you’ll wish you could stay longer! On a resort there are lots of lagoon based activities, from snorkelling and scuba diving to deep sea fishing or, for the less energetic, hook and line fishing from the side of a dhoni and having the resort prepare your catch for dinner. There are facilities for windsurfing, para-gliding, water-skiing, kayaking, paddle boarding and, for enthusiasts, some enticing surfing.

Resorts arrange gentle dhoni cruises to spot dolphins leaping and visits to local islands to see the traditional Maldivian way of life or to picnic on a sandbank. There are spas where trained therapists offer a variety of treatments including Ayurveda, a natural herbal system of wellness, and Yoga. For exercise, most resorts have a gymnasium and walking around the island is a fine way of learning about the tropical flora and fauna.

Some resorts organise lessons in cookery or wine tasting or feature talks on the environment, while others have displays of local handicrafts or a mini-museum of ancient maps and artefacts. A visit to Male’ is a chance for shopping and exploration, or to go underwater in the Whale Submarine or take to the air on a chartered photo-flight by seaplane. There are sports such as beach volleyball and futsal to play, and many resorts have billiards and table tennis, as well as indoor games. Satellite television keeps guests in touch with the world, and resorts have WiFi access as well as libraries of movies, magazines and books.

Visiting Male’

The capital of the Maldives is Male’, now proudly designated Male’ City due to its large population. All visitors from the airport or the islands arrive at the island’s northern waterfront where the majestic sight of three imitation sails roofing the main Izzuddeen jetty sets the tone of modern architecture. Tall buildings along the waterfront represent various building styles, from neo-colonial and modern art deco to futuristic towers reflecting marine heritage.

Behind the façade of bright new buildings, visitors taking a stroll around Male’ will discover the heart and soul of the Maldives. Jumhooree Maidan, the public square where a gigantic pole flies the Maldivian flag, is a pleasant place to sit and watch the waterfront action. To the west on the way to the quay where inter-island vessels dock, are markets to buy fresh fish, vegetables and the local speciality, sun-dried or smoked fish.

A street leading inland passes the Islamic Centre with its golden dome and the modern National Museum (an essential stop as it also features a philatelic corner and an intriguing police museum). Chandhanee Magu is lined with souvenir shops catering especially for tourists.

Further eastwards the road passes Mulee-age, the official residence of the President with its colonial fretwork friezes, the ancient Friday mosque and the charming minaret known as Munnaaru (built in 1674). The blue and white shrine, Medu Ziyaarath is a memorial to Abu Barakaath who introduced Islam to the Maldives. The People’s Majlis, the Parliament Building, is nearby. At the north-east corner of the waterfront ferries leave for the airport and to Hulhumale’.
To visit Hulhumale’ is to see how Maldivians are coping with the future. This residential island has been created on reclaimed land to house the burgeoning population of Male’. Buses provide transport around the island with its broad streets and parks, and LiveAboard safari boats are anchored in the harbour. There is a road link to the airport, while a bridge is being built to link the island with the south-east corner of Male’.

A new beach, Rasfannu, has been created on the western shore with an open-air roadside gymnasium complete with exercise machines. Close to the Southern Harbour, usually crammed full with vessels unloading cargo into waiting vehicles, is the Vilingili Ferry Terminal. Vilingili was one of the first resorts in the Maldives until it was taken over as a residential island. It is a pleasant island to visit to escape the hubbub of Male’ City as its byways are green and shaded and undisturbed by motor vehicles.

Getting There

There are flights to the Maldives direct from Europe as well as via the Middle East and from the main Asian airports with connections from the USA or Australia. Some airlines only operate seasonal charters and some have a code sharing arrangement with other carriers flying to Ibrahim Nasir Male’ International Airport.

Getting Around

There are ferries running regularly between the airport and Male’ at a cost of US$1 per passenger. Other ferries operate on a daily basis from Male’ in the afternoons to nearby islands, returning to Male’ in the mornings. There are separate ferries on a regular basis operating from ferry terminals on Male’ to Hulhumale’ and Vilingili. Taxis can be hired to get around Male’ and a bus service operates in Hulhumale’.

Resort representatives meet guests on arrival at Ibrahim Nasir International Airport and escort them to the jetty or domestic airport for transfer to their resort. Domestic carriers are Maldivian (Island Aviation) and Flyme, with Trans Maldivian operating seaplanes. Guests are met on arrival at every domestic airport for transfer by speedboat to their resort or guesthouse.

Domestic airports are at:
- Dharavandhoo, Baa Atoll
- Fuvahmulah, Graviyani Atoll
- Gan, Addu City, Addu Atoll (with facilities for international flights)
- Hanimaadhoo, Haa Dhaalu Atoll (with facilities for international flights)
- Ifuru, Raa Atoll
- Kaadedhdhoo, Gaafu Dhaalu Atoll
- Kaadhoo, Laamu Atoll
- Kooddoo, Gaafu Alifu Atoll
- Maamigili, Alifu Dhaalu Atoll (with facilities for international flights)
- Thimarafushi, Thaa Atoll
Tips For Tourists

Accommodation
Accommodation must be booked in advance of arrival to ensure a place to stay and the address must be entered on the Immigration form.

GUESTHOUSES: Either private homes with rooms for guests or purpose-built establishments with dedicated reception area and bedrooms with attached bathrooms and air-conditioning; there were 392 on inhabited islands in all the atolls registered with the Ministry of Tourism in September 2016. Suitable for travellers on a lower budget, these offer a taste of Maldivian life with local cuisine and a chance to appreciate Maldivian culture. Some islands have beaches for tourist use; watersports and diving can be arranged. On inhabited islands, a modest dress code applies and alcohol is prohibited but tourists can sometimes visit nearby resort islands or anchored LiveAbroad boats for wining and dining.

HOTELS: There are 17 hotels with better facilities than guesthouses but, as these are on inhabited islands (mainly in Male’), alcohol is not permitted and guests must dress modestly in public.

RESORTS: Each of the registered tourist resorts is on its own uninhabited island with superlative architect-designed accommodation, either in beachside rooms or overwater villas. Décor is contemporary or tropical island-style, comfort is luxurious, food ranges from international gourmet fusion to eclectic buffets; there are bars and evening entertainment, dive schools and watersports, and well-trained staff on hand for a memorable holiday experience in exclusive privacy.

LIVEABOARD: For small groups, a holiday on one of the 132 registered LiveAbroad boats is a chance to enjoy a diving or surfing safari, visiting a new dive spot every day and discovering the real Maldives, including desert islands perfect for a castaway picnic, arranged by the crew. Cabins are simply furnished with ensuite bathrooms and a communal table for dining on local cuisine prepared on board; alcohol is available for tourists.

Airport
Arriving passengers must fill in an Immigration form with passport details and address in Maldives and proposed length of stay.

Ibrahim Nasir International Airport is located on its own island about 10 minutes by passenger ferry from Male’. Resort representatives meet all arriving passengers and some resorts have private lounges for their guests. In the public areas there are a spa, a pharmacy, a post office, mobile telephone bureaux, a bank, an ATM, a left luggage office and several coffee shops. Duty free purchases can only be made on departure. As well as a fast track Immigration counter there are VIP lounges for airlines’ Business Class passengers.

Flight enquiries: 3322211; www.macl.aero

Alcohol
The consumption of alcohol is only permitted to foreigners in resorts or on tourist LiveAbroad vessels. It is not allowed on any inhabited island, even if you’re staying in a registered guesthouse or hotel. Resort bars and restaurants, however, are well-stocked with premium spirits, traditional and tropical cocktails, and fine wines from around the world.

Aquatic Sports
Some of the watersports available include banana boat riding, body boarding, catamaran sailing, canoeing, fly boarding, fun tube riding, glass bottom boat cruising, jet ski, kite surfing, knee boarding, paddle surfing, para-sailing, scuba diving, snorkelling, sports fishing, swimming, wake boarding, water skiing, wave surfing, windsurfing.

Ayurveda
This Asian natural healing system of herbal remedies and therapies is available at many resorts.

Bookshops
Male’ has several bookshops where books about the Maldives can be found, as well as popular novels and stationery.

Business Hours
(Sunday to Thursday)
Banks: 08:00-13:30hrs
Government: 08:00-14:00hrs
Private Sector: 08:00-17:00hrs
(Saturday: 08:00-14:00hrs)

Children
Some resorts do not permit children under eight years old; others provide babysitters, nurseries and playgrounds for kids. Resorts are fun and safe for children.

Clothing
Because of the hot climate, clothes of cotton material are recommended. Tourists should respect local culture and dress modestly, keeping from shoulders to knees covered when visiting, or staying on, an inhabited island.
Currency

The Maldivian Rufiyaa (MVR) is a non-convertible currency only available in the Maldives. However, US dollars are acceptable legal currency anywhere in the Maldives, based on the rate of US$1.00 representing MVR15.42. All major credit cards and currencies such as Euro and British Pounds are also accepted in tourist resorts.

Customs

Tourists are prohibited from bringing in the following items: alcohol; chemicals; dogs; idols for worship; gun powder and explosives; live plants and live animals, medicines or steroids; materials contrary to Islam; narcotics and psychotropic substances; pork and pork products, pornographic materials; spear guns, firearms and ammunition.

Disabled Facilities
